California Water Service personnel have just discovered a breach at a storage tank that serves the Sunshine Gardens area of South San Francisco. Initial water quality testing indicates that water quality was not compromised. However, in an abundance of caution, they are asking that you not use the water for drinking or cooking until they have more information.

Cal Water is investigating the incident with the state Division of Drinking Water (DDW) and local law enforcement and conducting additional water quality tests. They will provide results as they receive them over the next few days and will post updates at www.calwater.com.

We will notify you when we have confirmed that the water meets water quality standards. Until then, please use bottled water for drinking and cooking. You may save your receipts during this time for reimbursement by Cal Water. They also have bottled water available for pick up at 80 Chestnut Avenue in South San Francisco.

Cal Water apologizes for this inconvenience; protecting your health and safety is our highest priority.
