The City of South San Francisco prides itself on fiscal prudence and works diligently to protect our quality of life by maintaining current levels of public safety and other essential services. To address the recovering economy amid continual money grabs by Sacramento, South San Francisco needs local control over local funds for local needs.

While cities work to protect local services from State takeaways, Sacramento continues to find new and creative ways to take our funds. Over the last 5 years, the State has taken over $15 million from the City of South San Francisco. These takeaways left less money for the City to maintain current levels of essential services and protect our quality of life.
